Join Us As A Sponsor!

Founded in 1991, the International Genetic Epidemiology Society (IGES) membership uniquely combines multidisciplinary global representation, with the shared goal of improved population health through genetic epidemiology and statistical genetics research. The collective IGES membership has great strength in analytical expertise across multiple “omics” technologies and are focused on approaches for biological and clinical data integration to better understand human disease and improve public health. With these new developments comes an unprecedented need to bring statistical, epidemiological and computational knowledge skills that are relevant to genetic research to a broader audience of knowledge users.

Our audience is multi-national and diverse in their expertise and knowledge and the annual meeting provides the opportunity to share research, ideas and innovations. Sponsors for the annual meeting have an opportunity to be in front of and interact with this prestigious group. Expand your brand, network with our attendees, and support IGES in encouraging and promoting genetic epidemiology and statistical genetics research and the application of these approaches in human populations.

We are happy to discuss variations and alternative sponsorship possibilities, such as sponsoring poster session or young-investigators event. Please contact iges@geneticepi.org.
